Rocks, Minerals And Gemstones

- AGATE AVAILABLE IN ASSORTED COLORS -

Agate is a banded form of finely-grained microcrystalline quartz. The brilliant color patterns and banding make this translucent gemstone very unique. Agates have many distinctive styles and patterns, but each agate is unique. No two agates are the same.

C2 01 Agate

AGATE Hardness: 6.5
 Agate is named for a river in Sicily called AGATHIS, where it was found in the fourth century B.C. Agate is the most common form of chalcedony, and is a versatile commercial stone. Typically, in the center of the rock, where there is a cavity and crystals often form. The agate with a cavity is called a geode. Agate is found lining cavities of volcanic rocks worldwide. The rock formation in which the agate is found is approximately 30 million years old and the agate you see is found in Brazil. The mines have been worked since the 1880s and provide a large percentage of the world's supply of agate. While thousands of tons of agate are mined every year, only a small portion is suitable to be used for the products on display.

SiO2

C2 02 Amethyst

AMETHYST Hardness: 7
 Quartz is one of the most widely distributed minerals. Amethyst is the most valuable type of the quartz gemstones. It is characterized by its shades of purple, caused by iron. Amethyst is named after a legend to Greek legend where wine was "transformed" into a Greek name "amethystos" and was once an antidote against drunkenness in ancient times. Amethysts form in volcanic rock in the form of rods. It can be found in Canada, Mexico, Brazil and United States, but the best sources of amethyst are Brazil and Uruguay. Most of the world's supply comes from the same general area of Brazil and Uruguay.

SiO2

C2 03 Ammonite

FOSSILIZED AMMONITE
 Ammonites flourished in the ancient oceans, near the continents, at all water depths. They were common, probably very safe, and long-lived. In their modern relative the Nautilus. The modern ammonite species were less than an inch in size, the largest shells species reached more than 9 feet that across.

C2 04 Arrowheads

ARROWHEADS
 These arrowheads are replicas of those used by the Indians of North America, from the recent past to 10,000 years ago. They are not from any archaeological sites. Stones used for arrowheads are flint, which is brown and grey, and obsidian, which is black. Be careful! These arrowheads are sharp. Remember the Indians used them for hunting.

C2 05 Break Open Geodes

BREAK-OPEN GEODES
 How many different crystals and minerals can you find? Break the geodes open and discover what nature created over 25 million years ago. You will be the first person ever to see these minerals and crystals. Every Geode is Different! To break your geode place in a cloth bag or sock and tap lightly with a hammer. Take care when opening so you don't lose any of the crystals.

C2 06 Bloodstone

BLOODSTONE
 Bloodstone is primarily a green stone with red or brown spots that look like blood splatters. The stone is a helioscope which means toward the sun. The splatters of color can range in red to brown and could have blue or yellow splatters in addition to the green. This Gemstone is most commonly found in India, but can be found in Australia, Russia and Madagascar to name a few.

C2 07 Carborundum

CARBORUNDUM
 Silicon Carbide, or Carborundum is a man-made material that is generally used for abrasive materials such as grinding wheels. The material is very hard and has a high degree of thermal conductivity. The specimen you have is from a hand-sawing disk. Chemical composition is very complex, containing many different minerals.

C2 08 Calcite

CALCITE
 Calcite is a very common mineral and is the main constituent of limestone. Calcite occurs from solution in karstic and fossiliferous limestone. Crystals of calcite can be found in many different colors: white, yellow, green, pink, and blue. While the color of this calcite is natural, it has been treated to give it a smooth glass finish. This specimen of calcite is hand-picked in Mexico, but also in the United States.

CaCO3

C2 09 Desert Rose

DESERT ROSE (GYPSUM) Hardness: 2
 These natural formations of gypsum occur and form in "caves" or "desert roses". The colorless, transparent variety of gypsum forms masses of desert rose made of radial fibers. It is very soft and easily broken. Gypsum is the first mineral to be precipitated from evaporating sea water, and is found in bedded deposits throughout the world, including the United States. The state found such of the desert roses in a bedded, usually in a desert.

CaSO4.1/2H2O

C2 11 Dinosaur Teeth

FOSSILIZED DINOSAUR TEETH
 These teeth are from a dinosaur called Megaceratops that lived in the late Cretaceous era approximately 65 million years ago. The dinosaur lived in Mexico in Northern Mexico. Some of these teeth, we can assure that these dinosaurs were near coast. Megaceratops was a large herbivore, looking much like an armadillo and sometimes reached up to 45 feet high. They lived in shallow seas where building on a wide range of animal fossils.

C2 12 Emerald

EMERALD Hardness: 7.5-8
 Emerald is a variety of the mineral beryl colored green by trace amounts of chromium and sometimes iron. It is highly prized as a gemstone, often made more so by inclusions. Emerald is the influence for May.

Be3Al2Si6O18

C2 13 Emma Eggs

EMMA EGGS
 These unexamined pebbles are collected in Brazil, then cut and polished on one side so you can see the intricate structure. You can choose from Amazonite, clear quartz, and smoky quartz. There are also quartz amethyst with a chemical composition of about 7 hardness on the Mohs scale. This inclusion may vary in color stones are made from different minerals. To clearly view these, place a small flat under the stone.

C2 14 Fuchsite

FUCHSITE Hardness: 7-8
 Fuchsite is a dark green variety of mica. It can have a wonderful rich, emerald color that has a beautiful sparkly shine if the crystals are rough. It is often found in contact masses with small crystals. The green color is the result of chromium impurities.

K2Al3(Fe,Mg)3Si3O10(OH)2

C2 15 Geodes

GEODES are a hollow pocket within the rock. Over time, the inner edges build up during the night stage. Ground water seeping around and through the rock picks up a variety of minerals as it makes its way down from the ground's surface. These minerals deposit on the protrusion and deposit inside the developing geode. Over thousands of years, the result: beautiful layers of crystals inside the cavity of the sphere, now known as a geode. Every geode is a unique composition of minerals. Geodes can be found all over the world, including the United States.

C2 17 Kyanite

KYANITE Hardness: 4-5
 Kyanite is a polycrystal, with two other minerals: Anorthite and Melanite. A polycrystal is a material that shares the same chemical but different crystal structure with another or other materials. Kyanite has a unique characteristic in that it has a wide variation of hardness in the same crystal. It is an attractive mineral that can be found in various colors: blue, green, black, and orange.

C2 18 Lepidolite

LEPIDOLITE Hardness: 2.5
 Lepidolite is a rare mineral with red and blue in the past decade because available on the mineral market in large quantities. Lepidolite is an ore of lithium and forms in granitic masses that contain substantial amounts of lithium. The typical color is pink color of lepidolite is characteristic and is the only field rock available to identify lithium from other minerals. Lepidolite, like other minerals, has different varieties of lithium aluminum silicate which would be used together for the purpose of potassium ions. These potassium ions have produced the perfect cleavage.

KLi2Al3Si3O10(OH)2

C2 20 Mica

MICA
 Mica is a generic term applied to a group of complex silicate minerals that have a sheet of plate-like structure with different compositions and crystal properties. All mica from the phyllosilicate mineral class crystals with a remarkable cleavage in the direction of their surfaces, which permits them to peel into thin, flexible films. When split into thin films, they remain tough and elastic even at high temperatures. Mica possesses some of the most outstanding combinations of chemical, physical, electrical, thermal and mechanical properties which are not found in any other mineral.

C2 22 Opalite

OPALITE Hardness: 2-3
 Opalite shares the same basic chemical makeup as Opal. It's composition is of tiny Silicon Dioxide spheres which stack onto each other in a pyramidal grid shape. This grid allows the earth's light effect you see.

C2 25 Orthoceras

ORTHO CERAS
 The Orthoceras is a single shelled Cephalopods which means "head first". It is a variety of the squid, cuttlefish, or nautilus which can be found in the ocean today. This particular type of Orthoceras lived in the Devonian Period, 345-360 million years ago and was unrelated to the Nautilus, Nautilus.

C2 27 Quartz

QUARTZ Hardness: 7
 Quartz includes a variety of stones. Colorless quartz, or crystal quartz, is the most common. The word "QUARTZ" comes from the Greek word for "cut" and was believed to be a variety of quartz. The quartz water created a crystalline form, however, it is not always how it is formed. Sometimes it is found in veins, most of which occur in a crystalline form, however, they are making crystal balls. Quartz is used for optical and technical purposes, but only 10% is used for use for the purpose. The major source of quartz is in Brazil, but it is found throughout the world including the United States.

C2 28 Rose Quartz

ROSE QUARTZ Hardness: 7
 Named for its color, this stone ranges from pink to deep red. The color makes it a popular stone for jewelry and ornamental purposes. The crystals, it has been reported that when it is carved into delicate colorful figures. Brazil is the world's largest producer of rose quartz, but it is found in several locations throughout the world, including the United States and Africa. This particular stone is from the Connecticut. Africa, which provides the highest quality for jewelry. However, clear quartz is more commonly found elsewhere and clearly.

SiO2

C2 29 Sharks Teeth

FOSSILIZED SHARKS TEETH
 The Carboniferous Shagwilde, a great white shark and dinosaur tooth. The present Carboniferous shark teeth are approximately 18 inches long and have a thick, dark, smooth surface. These fossilized shark teeth are found in various locations throughout the world, including the United States and Africa. This particular stone is from the Connecticut. Africa, which provides the highest quality for jewelry. However, clear quartz is more commonly found elsewhere and clearly.

C2 30 Selenite

SELENITE Hardness: 2
 Selenite is a common chemical silicate mineral. It is an evaporate rock, meaning they are formed when bodies of water, lakes, rivers, and oceans, evaporate and the chemicals are deposited in solid crystal form. Selenite is a form of gypsum. When the gypsum has been cut and polished crystals it is called selenite. Much like Gypsum, it is a very soft mineral.

CaSO4.2H2O

C2 31 Ruby Red

RUBY RED (RUBY-ROZ) Hardness: 6.5-7
 Ruby Red is a combination of 2 different types of stones. Ruby and Zircon. Zircon is also known as "Opalite", a name derived from the Sanskrit word "Rajaratna" meaning Ruby and Zircon. Zircon is a mineral found in the United States and other countries. The color is usually a deep red, but can range from a light pink to a deep red. Ruby Red is a high quality crystal, it is a very colorful ornamental gemstone used in jewelry.

CaZrSiO4

C2 33 Amazonite

AMAZONITE
 The stone is named from that of the Amazon River from which certain green stones were formerly obtained. Amazonite is a mineral of limited occurrence whose locality from Brazil. High quality crystals have been obtained from Piau, Colombia. Because of its bright green color when polished, amazonite is commonly cut and used as a gemstone, the blue-green color due to small quantities of iron and vanadium in the stone.

C2 34 Apatite

APATITE Hardness: 3
 Apatite is actually three different minerals depending on the size of fluorine, chlorine or hydroxyl group. Apatite is widely distributed in all rock types, sedimentary and metamorphic. Color is typically green, yellow, red, blue, black, brown, and white. Some apatite is from the Connecticut. Africa, which provides the highest quality for jewelry. However, clear quartz is more commonly found elsewhere and clearly.

Ca5(PO4)3(F,Cl,OH)

C2 35 Aventurine

AVENTURINE
 The name Aventurine comes from the Italian "a ventura" meaning "by chance". It is a form of quartz, because of its lustrous and the presence of mineral inclusions that give it a shimmery look. Green is the most common color, but it can also be found in orange, brown, yellow, blue, or grey. Aventurine is used for ornamental purposes, including landscape scene, monuments, and jewelry.

C2 36 Tourmaline

TOURMALINE
 The tourmaline mineral group is a complex silicate of aluminum and boron. Its composition varies widely with sodium, calcium, iron, magnesium, lithium and other elements. Tourmaline occurs, in all shades, in thick prismatic and tabular crystals. Tourmaline has a wide range of colors: black to black-brown, grey, brown, yellow, blue, green, red and pink.

C2 37 Citrine

CITRINE
 This is a crystalline quartz from Brazil with a beautiful yellow color, sometimes referred to as the "sun" color. The color is usually created by a small amount of iron. Sometimes, one can see an inclusion of other minerals trapped within the crystal. Clear stone has a wide base and wide to narrow. Health with care.

SiO2

C2 41 Snowflake Obsidian

SNOWFLAKE OBSIDIAN
 The glassy stone is also called flowing obsidian. It has a blue tintation that makes it appear as though the black obsidian has been covered with snowflakes. While obsidian is a common stone, this special type is extremely rare. The stone is named after the snowflakes that were seen in the United States. Obsidian is named after a Roman named Obsidius. Because of its glassy texture, a sharp cutting edge can be formed. Obsidian is used for making cutting tools in the primitive times.

FLUORITE
Fluorite (also known as fluorapatite) is a halide mineral composed of calcium fluoride. The word fluorite is derived from the Latin root "fluere" meaning "to flow"...

C2 50 Labradorite

LABRADORITE
Labradorite's chemical composition is silicate (NaAlSi3O8) and fluoride (CaF2). The name labradorite comes from the province of Labrador in Canada. Many specimens show iridescent colors...

C2 53 Prehnite

PREHNITE
Prehnite is a calcium aluminum silicate mineral that crystallizes in the form of masses, globular formations and stalactites. Its color is usually a yellow to light green...

C2 55 Howlite

HOWLITE
Howlite, also known as Magnesite, has a porous texture with veins of black or dark grey and is found in cauliflower-like masses. It was first found in Nova Scotia in the 19th century by a mineralogist named Henry How...

C2 57 Serpentine

SERPENTINE
Serpentine got its name from it's slippery feel, green color and patterned appearance similar to that of a snake (serpent). Serpentine is a generic term applied to a large group of minerals...

C2 58 Rhodonite

RHODONITE
Rhodonite comes from the Greek word "rhodon" meaning "rose" due to its pink or rose red color. It is considered a silicate which are minerals containing silicon and oxygen...

C2 59 Solecite

SOLECITE
The word Solecite comes from the Greek word "solelekta" meaning "worm". It forms in clusters of sharp needle-like points radiating outward. When it is exposed to heat, the crystals will twist and curl up like a worm...

C2 72 Angelite

ANGELITE
Angelite, also known as Angel Stone is made from calcium sulfate and is a form of gypsum. The stone color is a soft glacier blue or light blue color. The center having snow-white flecks with brown or red colored inclusions. It is a rather recent discovery. It was discovered in Peru in 1987...

C2 73 Peridot

PERIDOT
Peridot, sometimes called Chrysolite, is a transparent, yellow-green color. It is one of the few gemstones that occur in only one color. Peridot is an abundant mineral found in Lava & can be found in meteorites. Although abundant, gem quality peridot is rare due to the chemical instability of the earth's surface...

C2 74 Tektite

TEKTITE
Tektites are small and pebble-like. They are made from fragments of rocks and minerals that have been melted by a meteorite impact. Upon impact they are thrown back into our atmosphere and fall again to earth. They can be found mainly in Ivory Coast, Africa, south-east Asia, & Caribbean-North America. They can range in age of about 300,000 years to 35 million years...

C2 75 Wonderstone

WONDERSTONE
Wonderstone is a stone that is made of over 75% volcanic ash particles. The ash is then compacted under heat and extreme pressure forming a rock. Circulating ground water gives the rock the colorful rings. Usually yellow, brown and maroon colors. These colors are due to the presence of iron oxide...

LINGAM
Lingam is a sacred semi-precious gemstone in the Hindu religion. It is not only a stone, it is a medium to connect with God, raise mind and body consciousness, and enhances the mind's concentration...

C2 77 Aragonite

ARAGONITE
Aragonite is a calcium carbonate. Like calcite, it has the same chemical composition but has a different crystalline structure. Aragonite is commonly Pink, White, Gold, Green, Brown or Blue. Because of its instability at high temperatures, Aragonite is found in deposits at low temperatures near the Earth's surface, such as caves or hydrothermal and marine environments...

C6 Unicorn Aura Quartz $ .07

UNICORN AURA QUARTZ
Quartz includes a variety of stones, colorless quartz or crystal quartz is the most common. The word "CRYSTAL" comes from the Greek word for "ice" and was believed to be eternally frozen. The simple quartz crystal is a six-sided prism. However, this is not always how it is formed. Sometimes it is found in veins, seams or pockets of rock. It is popular for carving objects and making crystal balls. This quartz has been treated with an aura coating which results in a shimmering, iridescent effect. Quartz is also used for optical and technical purposes, but only 10% is pure enough to use for this purpose. The major supplier of crystal quartz is Brazil, but is found abundantly throughout the world, including the United States. (C)

Iron Pyrite, FeS<sub>2</sub>, also known as "fool's gold" resembles gold due to its brassy yellow color and metallic luster. There are some types of pyrite that contain enough microscopic gold to warrant mining as gold ore! Take your chances with the whimsical miner with his "fools gold" bottle!

SALT PRODUCTS

PALLET PRICING AVAILABLE

These Salt Lamps are hand made from natural rock salt found in caves in the foothills of the Himalaya Mountains. The special properties of minerals in the salt are released through heating the salt by the use of an electric bulb or from the flame of a candle. The negatively charged ions act on the contaminants in the air by neutralizing them so they can no longer circulate. This helps breathing and promotes good health. Salt Lamps will last indefinitely as long as they are not exposed to excessive moisture.

Orgone Pyramids are made of a mix of resin, gemstones and metal shavings. The Metal shavings and the resin have the property of moving the life force energy back and forth. This cleanses stagnant and negative energies. The gemstones are electrically charged by the resin which enhances the powerful healing effects.

Salt Products

A Salt Lamp will cleanse the air in a home or office, via natural ionization. This is a natural means of improving Health. These Salt Lamps are hand made from natural rock salt found in caves in the foothills of the Himalaya Mountains. The special properties of minerals in the salt are released through heating the salt by the use of an electric bulb or from the flame of a candle. The negatively charged ions act on the contaminants in the air by neutralizing them so they can no longer circulate. This helps breathing and promotes good health. Salt Lamps will last indefinitely as long as they are not exposed to excessive moisture.

Thank You for your interest in Western Woods !

Western Woods was founded in 1980 by Richard and Joy McLaws in St. George, Utah. We have grown substantially throughout the years, but we still run our business based on those family values. We have worked hard and have earned the reputation of providing quality products and dependable service throughout the years. Western Woods continues to import a large variety of natural and enhanced rocks, minerals and gemstones from all over the world! In addition to rocks and minerals we have a large selection of Gemstone Jewelry, Educational products, Home Decor, and Holistic Gifts; many of which can be name dropped or customized for your store! We supply all types of specialty retailers worldwide with our products.

If you are a current customer we cannot Thank You enough for your business. If you are just browsing the catalog we hope there was something that caught your eye for your own retail store or attraction.

Please reach out to us with any questions you may have regarding Western Woods. We look forward to hearing from you.
